2018 Spring Lunch Panel & CEO Roundtable
April 18, 2018
Gilbreath Conference Center, Baptist Health Medical Center-Little Rock

Roundtable Discussion
The AHEF Board and UAMS MHA students will host a roundtable discussion prior to the spring lunch panel. CEOs from hospitals around the state will sit down with the individuals who are new to health care leadership and MHA students to answer questions, network and share lessons learned.

Panel - Arkansas & the Opioid Crisis:
Improving the Health Status of Your Community
Health care organizations provide an array of services for their communities aimed both at restoring health as well as keeping people fit and well so that they avoid conditions which lead to illness and injury. However, a rampant growth in the practice of overprescribing opioids and the resulting overuse of those drugs, is limiting the community health benefits of those preventive care programs. How does Arkansas plan to combat this epidemic?

Join us as a panel of experts discuss new state laws and regulations, including the Prescription Drug Monitoring Program; specific approaches to treatment including medication assisted treatment; the drug take back program; a family practice point of view; and much more…

Target Audience
C-Suite Executives, Vice Presidents and Directors who are focused on Population Health, Chronic Disease Management, Healthcare Reform, Strategic Planning, Business Operations or Community Outreach

Moderator
Renee Mallory, RN, BSN is the director of the Center for Health Protection at the Arkansas Department of Health. Ms. Mallory oversees public health programs including infectious disease, immunizations, outbreak response, health care and emergency medical system licensing and certification, substance misuse and injury prevention, the state trauma system, health preparedness, zoonotic disease and the prescription monitoring system. She also serves as a member of two state boards.

Ms. Mallory began her career with ADH in 1988 when she went to work in the Health Facility Services area as a home health surveyor. From there she served as the supervisor of the home health licensing and Medicare certification program before becoming the director of Health Facility Services in 2001. Prior to her current role as Center Director, she was Branch Chief of Health Systems Licensing and Certification. The Center for Health Protection manages over $75 million in program funding and 430 positions statewide.

Panelists
Dr. Gregory H. Bledsoe is a board certified Emergency Medicine physician and the current Surgeon General for the state of Arkansas. After completing medical school and residency at the University of Arkansas for Medical Sciences, Dr. Bledsoe spent five years on faculty in the Johns Hopkins Department of Emergency Medicine completing a two-year fellowship in International Emergency Medicine and a Masters in Public Health (MPH) from the Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health. In 2005, he received the “Teacher of the Year” award from the Johns Hopkins Department of Emergency Medicine.
